Lodging Revenues Continue to Set Records, Help Drive Economy

As we’ve reported before – what visitors to our destination spend at area hotels serves as one of our best barometers for overall tourism activity. And we have good news to report again! Visitors to Moore County through these hotel stays injected more revenues into our economy than ever before as reflected in the monthly room occupancy tax collection statistics. With the exception of two months (July, October), every month’s total thus far is the highest on record for the County since we began tracking this in 1988.

For the current fiscal year that started July 1, 2016 these collections, year-to-date for the first three quarters are tracking at 9% ahead of last year’s pace. Monthly statistics collected by the CVB echo this as well, reflected in both hotel occupancy and ADR (Average Daily Rate) reports, which are also on a record rate of growth for the year. That’s a very healthy position, and is a direct reflection of the great work by the owners, operators, and employees of the 40+ lodging properties located in Moore County. From the CVB – Thanks for all you do to help keep our community’s economy vital and vibrant.

Safe travels.

Malcolm McMillan Blue was a farmer and civic leader in rural Moore County. Blue’s father and grandfather came to North Carolina in the 1760s as part of the mass migration of Scottish highlanders. Blue donated land near his farm for the 1860 Bethesda Church (NR). His house, a vernacular interpretation of late Federal and modest Greek Revival architecture, is one of the county’s oldest buildings and possesses strong local architectural significance in the town of Aberdeen.

Three Reasons Tourism is the Purest Form of Economic Development

"Economic development," in its purest form, is the process of improving the quality of life for citizens by increasing the local tax base and economic well being of the community.

Of course, this is done by fostering and promoting investment in communities, which leads to additional jobs, which results in an increased population, which leads to the development of supporting retail, professional services, and activities.

Here are the three reasons why tourism is the purest form of economic development:

1. People come, spend money and go home. If you attract the right visitors, you don’t need more police and social services; they impact your infrastructure very little; yet they support your retail shops, restaurants, hotels, and get to know you as a community. If visitors like what they see and experience, they tell their friends via Facebook, Instagram and other social media sites. That’s free marketing and a third-party endorsement.

2. Tourism is the front door to your non-tourism economic development. Any site selector, investor, or commercial real estate firm will arrive in your community, as what? A visitor. With quality of life leading economic development, tourism provides the marketing and visuals that promote the best you have to offer in terms of nightlife, downtown, your amenities such as trails and parks, and your activities. Tourism showcases your community as a very desirable place to not only visit, but in which to live and work.

3. Tourism is a downtown’s best friend. The number one activity of visitors, in the world, is shopping, dining and entertainment in a pedestrian-friendly, intimate setting: your downtown. This is typically not the reason they visit, but it is their number one activity once they arrive. While local residents provide the sales so retailers break even, tourism can provide the profit margin. A great downtown, over time, can be an attraction in itself. Tourism and downtowns should be joined at the hip.

Tourism is the purest form of economic development, but it is often seen as the ugly stepchild. Yet tourism is one of the fastest growing industries, can provide a quick return on your investment, and provides you with the marketing that showcases the best of what you have to offer.

Roger Brooks, Founder & CEO, Roger Brooks International
North Carolina tourism generated record visitor spending in 2016 with a total of $22.9 billion, a 4.3 percent increase from 2015. Additionally, tourism industry-supported employment topped 218,000 jobs to set another record for the state.

Welcome Emily Jack to the Convention & Visitors Bureau!

Emily recently joined the CVB team as the new Visitor & Meeting Services Manager. She is a graduate of Lynchburg College in Virginia with a Bachelor’s Degree in Communications Studies. She began her tourism career at the Greenbrier Resort as an Operations Manager in Training. Shortly thereafter Emily became a Communications Specialist at the Greenbrier. Love and life brought her to our area where she most recently held the position of Special Events & Catering Manager at the Country Club of North Carolina.

At the CVB, Emily will manage the recruitment of volunteers for the CVB. She will also assist with group events that will be hosted in the area. Along with those duties, Emily will be providing additional support to the sales department on special projects.

Welcome Emily!
Visitors spent nearly $63 million per day in North Carolina in 2016 and contributed about $5.1 million per day in state and local tax revenues as a result of that spending.

Tourism Topics & Economics

Moore County Joins NC’s Southeast Partnership

As a rural county, Moore County needs to fill its economic development arsenal with every possible tool and resource to enhance our competitiveness and success in attracting quality new jobs and capital investment to our communities. Effective April 1, Partners in Progress (PIP) added a substantial new resource to this arsenal: Moore County has joined North Carolina’s Southeast Partnership (NCSE), a regional public-private economic development partnership that markets the southeast region of North Carolina nationally and globally to encourage new economic growth. Previously Moore County was affiliated with the Research Triangle Regional Partnership whose focus was more urban-oriented in the Triangle area.

Moore County will be integrated into all facets of NCSE’s marketing programing, including the website (www.ncse.org), buildings and sites database, marketing research, marketing collaterals, regional economic profile, and bio-renewable/biotech asset, marketing database.

NCSE’s region is composed of 18 counties, including the neighboring counties of Montgomery, Hoke, and Scotland.

Why Meetings within Meetings Matter for Large Events

The festivalization of meetings and events, whereby multiple activities from a variety of fields are programmed to take place over several days, has created a new meetings and events trend: purposeful sub-group meetings, according to Skift. One meeting expert sees more roundtables and intentionally designed networking at meetings and events these days, and organizers are arranging groups and conversations around predetermined challenges for discussion. Just as Twitter users curate specific follow lists or how Facebook users dictate which posts different individuals can see, attendees often find value when event planners segment their experiences at conferences.

What Restaurants can Learn from Hotels

Restaurants and hotels have at least two traits in common, reports Modern Restaurant Management. Both industries are faced with selling a perishable product in a consumer-informed world that is rife with competition. In a recent survey conducted by Hospitality Technology, hotels identified traditional loyalty programs as the single best interactive marketing tool to engage customers while delivering a high impact to the business. Restaurants can learn at least three key things from hotels - Implementing a loyalty program should be treated as a strategic business decision; engaging a critical mass of customers with a loyalty program will drive more business; and adding value to the brand with a loyalty program will boost franchisee sales.

Golf Factoids

Top 10 destinations for caddies from GolfAdvisor. Number 1 is the North Carolina Sandhills - led by Pinehurst No. 2 - is one of America’s hotbeds for hiring caddies. (Brandon Tucker/Golf Advisor)

Where to find caddies:

Note: Longleaf and Southern Pines don’t advertise the caddie service on their websites, so many golfers don’t realize they are even an option.
The Convention & Visitors Bureau (CVB) is Moore County’s economic development agency responsible for travel and tourism promotion, product development, and visitor services. The CVB will devise strategies to enhance the County’s tourism brand value and product to accommodate the next generation of visitors, thereby stimulating the local economy and enhancing the quality of life for residents and visitors alike.
